FEAR CONGRESS WILL JUMP IN

Board of Immigration Hopes to Get Laborers Before More Regulations Come.

Members of the Territorial Board of Immigration believe that while no action on further restrictions is probable during the present session of Congress, the agitation sporadically breaking out on the mainland against the "European invasion" may result in action during the next session. It is felt that Congress will sooner or later impose some rather stringent tests on the would-be citizens, and that among them will be the "literacy" tests.

A literacy test would shut out much of the present European immigration into the islands. Many of the peasants who arrived here on the steamship Orterle would have been unable to pass even a simple literacy test, while comparatively few were possessed of more than the rudest education. And yet they have already begun making a reputation as about the best immigrants the islands ever received from Europe.

Born and brought up in the country with all of their work out of doors and schools, particularly in Portugal few and far between, the Europeans who came by the Orterle had neither time nor opportunity to study arithmetic, grammar or even reading and writing. But they are making excellent plantation laborers, and appear to be contented, happy and hopeful for the future.

Doubt Literacy Test.

Members of the Board are inclined not to agree that the literacy test is a test of an immigrant's fitness to enter the country, and yet developments in Congress indicate that some such regulation will be enforced either at the next session of Congress or the one after it. Therefore, the policy of the Board will be to "make hay while the sun shines," in other words, to get all the good laborers from Europe that can be secured before Congress enacts regulations that would shut many of them out.

Still, it is not considered advisable to bring any here this summer. The Board feels that Portugal may object to another ship-load taken away before the first has had time to get really acquainted with life in Hawaii. Another reason for the postponement of the second immigrant ship is that Portugal may lend its influence to a regular steamship line from Europe to the islands. In this case, the immigrants can be brought at much smaller expense per capita.

At the present time, the Board's efforts are largely centered on negotiations to open the way for this regular line, and Dr. Victor S. Clark said recently that he feels hopeful of the result.

FIELD GUNS TRAVERSE GAP

Field Artillery Make Trip
From Schofield to Waianae.

That Waianae Gap can be used to get artillery from Lohela to Waianae plains has been demonstrated, six guns of the first field artillery making the trip last week and being but eight hours in going from the barracks to the plains.

The gap has now been used for an army wagon, field artillery and machine guns, the latter making the trip two weeks ago.

After the light artillery made the descent last week they did target practice on the other side, being hidden in a grove and dropping shot at targets in the sea which represented the boats of a hostile landing party.

Before the army undertook to negotiate the gap with teams it was considered but a bridge path and a poor and dangerous one at that, but Uncle Sam's soldiers have shown that they could accomplish what was virtually called the impossible, and now it is known that a battery could be rushed from Schofield to Waianae in time to repel an attack.
